many Democrats who were opposed either to the proposed rule or to driving it through under the lash. The demand for the previous question was sustained-140 to 120. Under the rule fifteen minutes were allowed on a side for debate. Mr. Hatch attempted to ask unanimous consent for further time, but Mr. Bynum objected. Some question followed as to the manner in which the time should be divided. In the course of this controversy Mr. Reed stated that so far as the Republican minority was concerned the rule reported from the com-tails to the rule, but the principles were the correct ones. Mr. Burrows, after stating that the proposed rule was substantially the rule of the Fifty-first Congress, withdrew the substitute he had offered. Before the debate began Mr. Catchings mittee on rules embodied the principle for which they had been contending. There might, perhaps, be some objection to the de-asked unanimous consent that those who so desired should have an opportunity to print remarks in the Record.

"Oh, I object," shouted Mr. Boutelle, with a smile. "Such remarks would make but a melancholy contribution to congressional literature.' The debate then began. It was calm, even tempered, and wholly unlike what had been anticipated. The Republicans were bubbling over with good humor over the consummation of their long legislative struggle and applauded every Democratic convert to the rule put in practice in the Fifty-first Congress.

Mr. Catchings was first recognized and made a two-minute speech. He yielded one minute to General Wheeler, who had just time enough to protest against it as antagonistic to the deliberation which ought to obtain in a legislative body like the House of Representatives, when the gavel dropped and he was summarily taken off the floor.

REED YIELDS TO BRYAN. Mr. Reed, who controlled fifteen minutes for the Republicans, at this juncture yielded five minutes to Mr. Bryan, the Nebraska Democrat. Mr. Bryan was very earnest in his opposition to the proposed rule. This was a matter of great importance, he said. Over half the States in the Union, including New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Nebraska, required the affirmative vote of a majority of their legislative assemblies to enact laws. It might be inconvenient at times, but it was essentially a safe plan. It was the safeguard of the minority. It gave the minority the power to compel the concurrence of a majority on any measure, and, while the power could be used for filibustering purposes, after all it was bet-ter to be safe than be sorry.

Mr. Springer, who followed Mr. Bryan, supported the proposed rule because he said it would enable the members of the House to transact the business which their constituents sent them here to transact, A burst of Republican applause greeted this statement, which was renewed when he said that the House had in a month done but two days' business. "My constituents are tired of it," said he in conclusion, "and I hope the House is tired of it. I hail this as the dawn of a brighter day Mr. Kilgore argued that the proposed rule was unnecessary in a legislative body in which the controlling party had 94 majority, and thirty more than a quorum. Ex-Speaker Grow upheld the principle incorporated in the proposed rule, but objected to its details as cumbrous. Mr. Russell, a Georgia Democrat, de-clared that no one would have the temer-Ity to affirm that the Fifty-first Congress would have adopted the quorum-counting device had the Republicans in that House not been so hard pressed for a quorum.

With the enormous majority possessed by the Democrats of this House it was a humiliating spectacle to see them forced to the adoption of the revolutionary expedient. A round of Republican applause anwered this.

Mr. Reed, whose face was aglow, arose, and, with a display of fervent generosity and good humor that furnished the inspiration for more Republican enthusiasm asked unanimous consent for five minutes more. "I don't want to use it myself," said he, blandly, "I would like to distribute it among my Democratic friends across the REED'S WORDS GOAD BYNUM. Mr. Reed's words seemed to goad Mr. Bynum particularly, and he objected in a loud voice. Thereupon Mr. Reed said he would only consume a minute of the remaining time at his disposal. He thought It was unnecessary for him to say anything. The scene here to-day, said he, is a more effective address than he could make. The House was about to adopt the principle for which the Republicans had contended since the Fifty-first Congress. "I congratulate the Fifty-third Congress," said he, impressively, "on the wise decree it is about to make." (Republican

Mr. Outhwaite, a Democratic member of the committee on rules then, in a few hurried words, explained the difficulties under which the House has been laboring and the imperative demand for the remedy this rule proposed.

Mr. Catchings, in concluding the debate, declared that if the proposed proceedings were revolutionary it had been forced by the representatives of a great party who insisted on a policy of obstruction on the most trivial and unimportant legislation. He resented the idea that such obstruction could be considered statesmanlike. Yet, having become the settled policy of the opposition, heroic measures were necessary in order that the House could transact business.

The vote was then taken on the adoption of the new rule. There was no excitement. The Republicans all voted in favor of it and it was adopted-212 to 47. The Democrats who voted against it were as follows:

Abbott, Barnes, Black of Georgia, Bland, Breckinridge of Kentucky, Bryan, Bynum, Capehart, Causey, Cobb of Alabama, Conn, Cooper of Texas, Covert, Cummings, Dunn, Durborow, English of New Jersey, Epes, Goldzier, Grady, Hall of Minnesota, Hines, Holman, Hunter, Kilgore, Lane, Lapham, Lester, Mallory, Martin of Indiana, Mc-Aleer, McKaig, McMillen, Reilly, Russell of Georgia, Ryan, Stevers, Talbott of Maryland, Tracey, Turner of Georgia, War-ner, Wells, Wheeler of Alabama, Whiting, Williams of Illinois, Williams of Mississippi and Wise, a total of forty-seven. Mr. Reed was immediately surrounded by his party friends and given an ovation. Some of the Democrats got up a counter demonstration over Mr. Catchings. A large bunch of La France roses was carried up the aisle and placed on Mr. Reed's desk. Another Republican outburst followed. The flowers were sent with the compliments of Representative Apsley, of Massachusetts. The parliamentary wheels began moving again in the House, and then came the approval of the last three legislative days, which had up to this time remained a stumbling block to progress.

THE NEW RULE TRIED. Then came the question of discharging the Sergeant-at-arms from the continuing order to arrest members adopted about a month

Mr. Reed said a grave question of parliamentary procedure was involved, and, in order to have the law investigated, he submitted a resolution reciting that the order of arrest was void. He asked that this be sent to the judiciary or rules committee in order that the right of arrest might be authoritatively determined and a careful precedent established.

The Speaker ruled out the question, on the ground that the first business was to discharge members now under arrest before taking up general principles. On the motion to discharge the Sergeantat-arms, a yea and nay vote was secured, and this gave the first practical illustration of the operation of the new rule. The Speaker named Messrs, Dockery, Democrat, and Cogswell, Republican, as tellers to watch the count, and, if necessary, count members present, but not voting. They took their places at the side of the clerk, each keeping a separate tally of the vote. In order to force the recording of members as present but not voting, in accordance with the provisions of the new rule, the Republicans declined to vote on the first toll call. At its conclusion Mr. Livingston made the point of order that, under the new rule, there was no second call of the roll, but in lieu therefor the list of names reported by the tellers present but not voting should be called. The Speaker, however, stated that the new rule did not contemplate any interference with the roll call, and that the roll call under rules of the House included a second call of those who had failed to respond on the first call. He overruled the point of order, and the roll call proceeded. Finding that a quorum had voted on the first call the Republicans changed their tactics on the second call and answered to their names. As the result of the vote-226 to 5-showed that a quorum was present, the tellers made no report. Messrs. Daizell and Johnson of Ohio, instead of voting, responded "present." This discharged the warrant issued to the Sergeantat-arms under date of March 21. Saturday, April 21, after 2 o'clock, was, by special order, set aside for the delivery of eulogies to the memory of the late Senator Gibson, of Louisiana. Mr. Wells, rising to a parliamentary in-quiry, wanted to know whether leaves of absence could be granted to members under the rules save on account of sickness. 'Certainly," replied the Speaker. House can grant leaves of absence for any reason." "if any member is granted such leave of absence," inquired Mr. Wells, "has he a right to draw his pay?" "The Chair has no control over the question of members' pay," returned the Speaker, amid laughter. A regular gorge of committee reports, blocked by the flibustering of last week.

were presented under the call of the committees. The House then, on motion of Mr. McCreary, went into committee of the whole to consider the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill. After speeches by Mr. McCreary, in support of, and Mr. Hitt, adverse to the bill, the House, at 4:40 p. m.,

Reed Applauded in a Theater. WASHINGTON, April 17.-Ex-Speaker Reed was the recipient of a very extraordinary and unusual compliment as he entered the National Theater to-night, where the Coghlan company was producing Oscar Wilde's play "A Woman of no Importance." As he walked down the center aisle during the first act he was recognized. Some one started to applaud. In an instant the demonstration spread in all directions, and beore he had reached his seat the whole house was wildly joining in the ovation. It was a most unusual occurrence in a Washington theater. Mr. Reed bowed his acknowledgments.

Inheritance Tax Law Invalid.

LANSING, Mich., April 17.—By unanimous opinion of the Michigan Supreme Court to-day the Doran inheritance tax law was declared unconstitutional. The act was passed by the last Legislature. It pro-vided a tax of 5 per cent. on all property of the value of $500 and upward inherited by corporations or collateral heirs and a tax of 1 per cent, on inheritances of lineal heirs of $5,000 and upward, the revenue from both to go into the State's general fund. The revenue to the State under the act was upwards of $150,000.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 17 .- Last night the auditors of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and Lake Erie & Western railroads concluded their investigation of the accounts of cashier Frank Hoy. A few days ago the officers had reason to believe there was a shortage of $400. Mr. Hoy retired, and rather courted an investigation of his office, which he had conducted for nine years. The officers of the company discovered that instead of a shortage of $400 it was within a few cents of $1,000. An audience was held with Mr. Hoy, when he attempted to effect a compromise, but failed. Detectives this morning discovered that duplicate bills had been collected from various merchants in the city and several firms have paid Mr. Hoy twice for the same shipment of goods. The double receipts signed by Mr. Hoy were found among the files of receipted bills in the offices of two or three firms who do considerable shipping over the road. The officers of the road are now in consultation with Mr. Hoy.

Breckinridge Exposure Leads Them to Avoid the Appearance of Evil.

Letter in Philadelphia Telegraph. The moral influence of a bad example is furnished by the Breckinridge trial. Coincident with the exposure of that trial some quite remarkable changes have occurred in the general manner and condition of things at the capital. A spirit of watchfulness and caution has come over the statesmen. It is with the greatest reluctance that they come out of the hall in response to cards sent from the ladies' reception room, and when they do the interviews are cut short. The reception room no longer has the appearance of a drawing room during a fashionale tea. Women calling on members to get their influence for appointment or to keep them in office, or to aid in the passage of a little bill, meet generally with such a cold reception that their visits are discouraged, and the once popular reception room is now nearly deserted most of the time. It is a rare thing now to see a member sitting with a lady in any but the private galleries, and the statesmen in both wings of Congress are very circumspect. There is a feeling on the part of public men that the exposures in this case are liable to cast discredit upon the whole body of statesmen; that public suspicion may be aroused to the belief that the moral atmosphere at the capital is bad, and that their most blameless acts may be looked upon with doubt. So much has been written about Washingon life, especially about official life, insinuating much of doubtful cast that this offensive scandal is likely to make Washington appear to the innocent public as one of the most immoral cities in the world, and an official life as a parliament of scandal. As a matter of fact, there is ess of open impropriety than in most any city of its size; year by year the tone of society has improved, both in official and private circles, and Congress is composed chiefly of a steady, earnest, not over brilliant lot of men of domestic habits, most of whom have their families with them.

MITCHELL, Ind., April 17.-This has been a field day for Republicans at Mitchell. Four largely attended conventions were held, and the town was swarming with strangers. This morning, at 9 o'clock, delegates to the judicial convention, composed of Monroe and Lawrence counties, met at the Normal College and nominated John E. Edmondson, of Bloomington, for prosecuting attorney. At 11 o'clock the convention to select two candidates for joint Representatives of the counties of Dubois, Orange, Lawrence and Martin counties, nominated A. W. Porter, of Loogootee, and Joseph Schwartz, of Huntingburg. Directly after noon the joint senatorial convention, composed of delegates from Jackson and Lawece counties, met and, after two ballots, Louis C. Schneck, of Seymour, was declared the nominee amid much real enthusiasm. Four candidates were before the convention. The most important convention of the day was to nominate a cadidate for Congress to contest the Second district with John L. Bretz, who will be renominated by the Democrats. It was held at 2 o'clock. The big college hall was packed, and among those present were students in attendance at the school. Daviess county presented the name of Col. A. M. Hardy, of Washington; Knox county put Capt. James H. Welton, of Knox, in nomination; Lawrence presented James E. Edwards, of Mitchell, and Orange nominated Judge W. K. Gardner, of Daviess. On the second ballot Hardy was an easy winner, and his nomination was made unaimous amid a storm of applause. Colonel Hardy is one of the most brilliant of the campaigners in this part of the State, and he promises to make one of the most formidable candidates ever presented in this Democratic district. There is a genuine expression that Bretz will be defeated. Over a dozen State candidates attended the conventions to-day and contributed to the success of the meetings.

Ugly Cloud Thrown on Shambaugh's Nomination for Mayor.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 17 .- In answer to a call from headquarters the Democratic city central committee met this afternoon at 4 o'clock. It is said that the editors of the Staats Zeitung and Sentinel have sent written requests to the committee, demanding the resignations of that branch of the committee which conducted the recent alleged primary election. It is stated on reliable authority that the letters are imperative and it is for the purpose of considering these letters that the committee meeting was called. Members of the committee are in a stew over the situation. If they do resign it is a plea of guilty to the charge of committing fraud and stealing the nomination of Shambaugh. If they do not resign it means the probable defeat of Shambaugh.

Picked a Strong Ticket.

Thatcher; marshal, William F. Steiger; councilmen, N. F. Innis, N. S. Martz and

R. P. Rice. Instructed for Peterson.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. DECATUR, Ind., April 17 .- At one of the most enthusiastic meetings of the Republicans ever held in this county delegates were appointed to the State and congressional conventions. The meeting was addressed by James E. Watson, of Rushville. The delegates to the congressional convention were instructed to vote for R. S. Peterson, of this city, for Congress from the Eleventh district. Albany Town Candidates,

SMART LITTLE INDIANS. Remarkable Results of the Training

System at the Carlisle School. Philadelphia Telegraph. To-morrow morning, at 10 o'clock, there will arrive at the Broad-street station a party of seventy Indian youths, under the charge of Capt. R. H. Pratt. They repre-sent the Carlisle Industrial School in this State, and are taken on a tour to let the public understand how practical the manual training and how civilizing the processes in vogue at that institution. In this band of Indian children there are forty boys and girls who form a choir, and thirty boys in the military band.

Among these children one of the most notable is Dennis Wheelock, the band master, a full-blooded Oneida Indian, not yet twenty years old. After this boy came to the school at Carlisle he became so homesick that he wrote to the Indian commissioner and asked to be sent away. He was, however, induced to go into the printing office, and acquired the typographical art, becoming in a short time a good typesetter. From this position he was moved to a clerkship in the printing department, and then transferred to the main office in the Interior Department, and is now receiving a salary of $1,000. Hawing heard his brother play on the cornet, he was induced to take up the study of that instrument, and in a comparatively short time became wonderfully proficient. Judges of cornet playing say that he produces tones as soft and sweet as any made by Levy or Arbuckle.

While the Carlisle School does not seek to give more than a thoroughly practical education to these Indian youths and to fit them for earning their own livelihood, it does take special pains to stimulate individual talent when it is manifested in any particular direction, and young Wheelock was furnished with the assistance needed to produce a musician of the first order. school, the instructor of all those musically inclined, and he has prepared all the band music from compositions of the greatest writers with all the necessary transpositions. There are a number of these chil-dren who have displayed remarkable talent and some of them have voices of unusual beauty. This is particularly to be said of Lirnie Thompson, a very beautiful girl, who is a Chippewa Indian. Her voice is a deep, mellow and pure contralto, and at the concert in Washington a few nights since, at which nearly all the government officials were present, she was encored four times on one song. Another charming girl is Julia Doris, a soprano, a full-blooded Tuscarora. Elmer Simon, who is to sing "The Pilot," by Nelson, has a deep, vibrate bass voice and is a Pueblo Indian. Remons, one of the most interesting children in this group, is the daughter of old Chihuahua, one of the worst Indians who ever infested the Southwest, and who was eventually captured by General Crook and imprisoned in Alabama. It was supposed by all that when this child came to the school she would prove the most intractable of all, but, on the contrary, under its ennobling influences she is growing up to be a very fine may be said, in general seeks to give these boys and girls a thoroughly practical education; but the officers make it a point to enlarge the scope of their endeavors whenever they discover in any of their pupils some notable gift. The children are kept in the school during the winter, and are placed on farms or in workshops during the summer, the locations being sufficiently near to keep them all within the influence of the institution.

Wives of Literary Men.

Bok's Letter. It seems a mistake to me to give currency to the idea that the wives of our best-known literary men are apart from their husbands' work, and devote to it an interest simply as a means of livelihood. When one looks over the ground and regards the facts, the reverse is exactly the truth. Just as Mrs. Howells is the most interested of readers and critics of her husband's work, so, for example, is Mrs. Frank R. Stockton a very careful follower of everything which the author of "The Lady or the Tiger?" does. General Lew Wallace has the most tireless and devoted helpmate in his wife, and he has been frank enough to say that without her help he could never have written "Ben Hur." Everything that Robert Louis Stevenson writes passes under the eye of his wife before it goes to the publisher, and editors who have handled his manuscript can attest to the frequency with which Mrs. Stevenson's handwriting is met. Eugene Field looks upon his wife as his truest critic, and nearly every poem he writes is first recited by him to her. Conan Doyle absolutely depends upon his wife for suggestions as to his work, and his first transcript is invariably given to her to look over. Edward Bellamy, too, refers his work to the companion of his home. In fact, the wives of our literary men are a greater part of their lives than many people imagine, and constant association with books and literary people make them, in many cases, the most competent of critics. I know one author who never sees his manuscript after his first writing. He hands it to his wife and she goes over it carefully, adding and revising at her will She, in turn, gives it to her daughter, who transfers it to the typewriter, and returns it again to her mother, who reads it over once more and gives it to her husband Seldom does he go over it, and as his wife gives it to him he sends it to the editor or publisher.

The Senators from Illinois are not rich men, nor the Senators from Tennessee. In fact, there are very few rich Senators, and there have never been many of them at a time, and the rich men that have been in the Senate have never counted for much. The attempt to lower the Senate in popular esti-mation by calling it a "Rich Man's Club" is no more respectable than the wildest fallacies that Mr. Peffer indulges in, and simply serves to build up a constituency for such men as Peffer.

"Willie" Wild's Memory, New York Daily American. "Willie" Wilde, whom Mrs. Frank Leslie divorced and who is reported to have got married again in London, is remembered in New York principally for enjoying himself and wearing corsets, both of which he Philadelphia Record. Geneology has developed the fact that the name "Chauncey" was originally "O'Shaughnessy." Yet Dr. Depew denies that he is a presidential candidate.

Every woman has an idea that it ought to be a pleasure for a man to work for money for her to spend. Everybody loves mignonette. Some people have trouble to make it grow. This is because the soil does not contain sufficient lime. Send and get your slacked lime this month. Spread it thickly over the earth where you propose sowing your mignonette seed. The rain will wash it in or you can dig it in about an inch deep. Do this on a mild day. Then, in April, which is the time The purpose of the Carlisle School, it | for sowing the seed, your soil will be ready
